

José Sánchez

José Sánchez was born on July 30, 1979 in San José, Costa Rica. Jose is a self-taught Digital Animator and Illustrator. He also has a bachelor of fine arts from the Universidad de Costa Rica, with a major in graphic design. Many years after that he decided to continue his studies in art but with a strong focus in animation and as a result he completed a Concept Art program at the Vancouver Animation School. His work has always been linked to the field of advertising and entertainment with motion graphics pieces for companies such as Digitas, Bank of America, KitchenAid, Sony among others. However, after working mostly in advertising, his career took a turn towards the entertainment animation industry and he moved to Japan to work as a Concept Artist for the company Marza Animation Planet, a company dedicated to the creation of animated films and series. Due to his passion for art, he has always kept producing pieces of art parallel to his studio work, one of his interests has been to produce Time-Based Art pieces which have allowed him to approach experimentation in aesthetics, animation and sound. He is currently dedicated to gathering all the knowledge learned over the years in art, 3D animation, programming, editing, special effects and directing them towards his emerging artistic production.
